The World Literacy Summit (WLS) brings together leaders from different countries representing over two-thirds of the world’s population, and all with a single focus – advocating, championing and educating on the vital importance of improving literacy levels across the globe.

Our four-day global event hosted biannually by the World Literacy Foundation in Oxford comprises insights and inspiration from pioneers, policymakers, and literacy experts. Many of the sessions are facilitated by the very people dealing first-hand with the issues presented. No other literacy nor education event focuses as closely and as comprehensively on this highly specialized sector.

Our last summit had moved to an online experience in the past year due to the well-known global pandemic. However, this was a fantastic opportunity to reach more people worldwide with our message about the importance of literacy and education. Thanks to our past speakers’ support, we were allowed to create a digital library with over +100 meaningful presentations related to the literacy sector, available on-demand for delegates, academics, and the general public interested.

The next World Literacy Summit will take place in April 2023 and be held at Oxford University in The United Kingdom. This conference will create an excellent opportunity for academics and professionals to exchange ideas, collaborate and network with other global literacy leaders.
